

Accountability to Accurate Knowledge is about what students discuss.

They make claims and try to be as specific and accurate as possible.

They make claims and try to be as specific and accurate as possible. Students ask each other challenging questions such as:

"Are those statistics accurate?" "What is your basis for that conclusion?" "Where did you see that in the text?" So, Accountability to Accurate Knowledge is about getting the facts straight—individually and as a community.